World War 2 Black Ops, Volume I Dick Avery

This is a collection of stories about the world's second oldest profession. It is the world of clandestine, irregular behind-the-lines guerrilla warfare and spying. It includes assassinations, sabotage, espionage and other secret agent activities in Europe prior to, during and after D-Day.

Forget Hollywood and James Bond. Forget tuxedos, vodka martinis, five-star hotels and tearing around in sports cars with beautiful women. Agents were French farmers, smugglers, tycoons, prostitutes, policemen, telephonists and peasants, to name a few. They all played a part as informers, saboteurs, agents and partisans. Their credentials were courage, fortitude, patience and a devotion to freedom.

Among other stories, you'll read about young Jewish men who fled Europe and formed a commando unit to fight Hitler, a commando team who parachuted behind German lines to destroy a plant making a component for an atomic bomb for the Third Reich, a team of assassins sent to liquidate the 3rd highest ranking Nazi, and a group of brave women who parachuted behind German lines to secure intelligence for the Allies.
