A young girl is missing and Taryn's camera is showing her a past she NEVER wanted to see...

Beautiful, young Cheyenne Willoughby had her whole life ahead of her. And then, on her 18th birthday, she simply vanished without a trace, rocking her small Georgian town to the core. Although her parents keep up the hope that she'll return again one day, the years are passing by without any sign of Cheyenne or what might have happened to her.

Now, multi-media artist Taryn Magill has moved onto the very farm where Cheyenne spent her last night. She went there to teach a class at the local college, but her job takes a completely different turn when she's thrown into the middle of Cheyenne's mystery.

Armed with her camera, Miss Dixie, that can see the past and bringing along her childhood friend Matt for the ride, Taryn aims to find out what happened to Cheyenne once and for all. Is the young girl still out there, trying to find her way home? Or did she succumb to some horrible fate? As Taryn finds herself more and more entrenched in Cheyenne's mystery she begins unraveling the secrets of the rural southern town.

The spirits here are restless, but it might be the living she must fear the most!

The third book in the Taryn's Camera series, a paranormal mystery series that revolves around 30-year-old Taryn Magill, a mixed media artist who recreates historical, and often rundown, buildings through her paintings. Her real talent, however, is the fact that she can SEE the past through the lens of her beloved camera, Miss Dixie. Together, they work to solve the mysteries of the places they visit-sometimes with the extra help of the dead. The hauntings and poltergeists are only the beginning of what they find! A little crime noir, a little mystery, a little paranormal-and a whole lot of fun!

Author's note: Although the book was professionally edited prior to publication, it appears that errors were missed along the way. In May 2015 I hired another professional editor to re-edit the book so that this re-released version is error-free.
