With the help of a new circle of friends who call themselves the Libertine Belles, history professor Ellen Bartlett discovers a brave new world of sexual opportunity. Among the attractive men who court her are fiery-haired composer Angus; tall and elegant Hector, who teaches creative writing; dazzlingly handsome Gerry the Drummer; and Hugh, a gentle giant who illustrates books and sells cartoons to Playboy. But when the Belles learn that a sexual predator lurks among their manly playmates, they court danger by conducting their own investigation. Much to Ellen's horror, she finds herself falling hard for one of the prime suspects. Ellen's daughter Amber knows it's time to get serious about choosing a career. Her new internship, her studies, and her job leave no time for a real boyfriend, only the occasional hot encounter with guys she barely knows. Then a class project leads Amber to correspond with Amator, a mysterious guru of the Art of Seduction, whose methods are less than politically correct. One of Amber's Latin professors seems to have a problem with women, and she learns that illicit activities are taking place during the wee hours of the night in Chester Hall. As Amber falls under Amator's spell, she and her friends discover that the sexual politics of life at Parnell State University are more complicated, and dangerous, than they ever imagined.
