Madrid is under siege - it is 1937 and Ernest Hemingway has come to Spain to report on their civil war. Hemingway does not just want to write, he also wants to help make a film, a propaganda film to support the Republican cause. That film would eventually be called The Spanish Earth. With him are his lover and future wife Martha Gellhorn, a Dutch film crew and an American matador assistant. But their efforts are hampered by the intervention of Admiral Wilhelm Canaris head of German army intelligence and SS Reinhard Heydrich who not only want to sabotage the film making but are also involved in a wider plot to discredit the Republic's Russian advisers. Swept up in these events are Julián and Maria, childhood sweethearts who must challenge their own beliefs about freedom and their support for the Republic. Hemingway's Spanish Earth is based closely on historical events and real people. All the central characters depicted (with the exception of Maria) existed and were in Spain at the times described. They include Kim Philby the Russian spy, Franco the future dictator of Spain, reporters Herbert Matthews, Virginia Cowles and Mikhail Koltsov, John Dos Passos the famous author, and many others.
