When I first became a single mom, everyone else had already made up their mind about whether I'd be able to homeschool. The consensus was that it would be impossible, and as far as they were concerned, that was the end of that. I would have to get a job and put the kids in public school. The truth is, it almost was the end on several occasions. For many years, I battled with the same questions you might. How will I afford this and then sustain it? Can I really find time for it all? What will I say to all those in opposition? Is this really the best for my kids? Single Mom Homeschooling answers all of those questions and more. You'll find encouragement for your heart from someone who has been there. You'll find stories and stats from over 700 moms just like you. And of course, you'll find practical tips for all of the obstacles we face as single moms wishing to homeschool. I'll help you find the perfect curriculum for your family, a schedule that will make it all seem easy, and the courage to take on this noble task. Right now it's probably all so hard to fathom, but the promise remains: God is "...able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us" (Eph. 3:20).
